December 19–22, 2022

Enhancing and Reconnecting Biological Research in the Post-Pandemic Era

July 1, 2022

To Whom It May Concern:

On behalf of the Chinese Biological Investigators Society (CBIS, <https://www.cbisociety.org>) and its President, Professor Yibin Kang of Princeton University, I cordially invite you to participate in the 13th Biennial Conference of CBIS to be held in Las Vegas, USA, December 19–22, 2022 and invite your company to sponsor our conference.

CBIS, formally the Ray Wu Society in honor of Professor Ray Wu, is an international nonprofit organization of professionals of Chinese origin in life sciences, aiming to provide a platform for interaction, collaboration, and advancement of life sciences in China. Members of the society are principal investigators in academic institutions and research scientists in industry, mostly residing in North America.

This meeting, which will be held in-person in Las Vegas while virtually connected to the Westlake University in Hangzhou, China, will attract many life science researchers from North America, Mainland China, and the rest of the world. They will bring their innovative research results and brilliant scientific ideas to Las Vegas for exchange and networking. For the benefits of the life sciences and healthcare communities, we very much appreciate your generous donation to make this important conference a success.

Please refer to the attached “Exhibit for Sponsorship Opportunities and Benefits” for more details.

We are looking forward to your positive reply.

Sincerely,

Charlene Liao, Ph.D.
Board Member of CBIS and Chair of Promotion and Sponsorship Committee
